

what'd
I say

Australian singer/songwriter Kara Grainger's debut album, Grand and Green River, bursts through speakers like a runaway freight train. She has a "take no prisoners" approach from the get-go as the harp churns behind the foot-stomping opener, "What You Wanted." She duets with Amos Lee on the funky "On My Way" and displays a wide array of acoustic and electric guitar excursions throughout. Her vocals are not as gutsy as Susan Tedeschi's, but her sultry approach results in a similar soulful groove.
